The Chancellorship

WITH the Board of Trustees of the University of Georgia, at its next meeting, rests the decision of a question which is of vital importance to the success and prosperity of the University.

The question arises out of the selection of a Chancellor to succeed the late lamented Dr. Mell. It is a fact that admits of neither question nor concession, that every Trustee who casts his vote will be governed solely by his desire to subserve the best interests of the State University. To this end, anything that smacks of sectarianism or suggests motives of personal preference, should be avoided by the officers in whose hands the alumni have placed this sacred charge. The position is one, the very nature of which places it beyond the pale of politics or of sects.

It is but natural that the young men, whose interests are most nearly affected, should have some voice in the selection of this important officer. It is still more natural that their position should afford the best opportunities of judging of the peculiar fitness of some of the gentlemen whose names have been mentioned in connection with the position.

While the peculiar nature of the office does not admit of contentious candidacy, it is a well known fact that Professor Harry H. White, now connected with the University, is spoken of for the position, and that his friends are earnestly endeavoring to secure his election.

Professor White is a gentleman whose every qualification renders him capable of fulfilling the important duties connected with the chancellorship. A finished scholar, a thorough disciplinarian, a man of sound judgment and discretion, an officer of the church, his mental acumen and personal magnetism will be felt in the upbuilding of the University.

Of our able faculty, Professor White is the only member who will be considered in connection with the office. His experience as professor in the University will afford him an advantage that it will be hard for outside applicants to overcome.

But, apart from all considerations of residence, experience or such advantage, the personal ability and intrinsic merit of Dr. White make him, above all others, the proper man for the position.

The students now at the University, with unusual unanimity, favor his selection, and, with the alumni and friends of the college, will deprecate any attempt to compass his defeat, by the introduction of politics, sectarianism or personal prejudice in the consideration of the question.

THE REPORTER.

THERE is no more important factor in college life than the college journal. Operating in a limited field, as it does, and being essentially a college creation, as it is, we find in the college journal the unerring pulse by which the circulation of the whole component system may be judged. In nine cases out of ten the columns of the college paper afford a true criterion of the excellence of the school. A sheet replete with bright and witty locals, a few columns devoted to well edited literature, and a column or so of pointed and timely editorials, with proper attention to athletic sports, denotes a college where system and discipline are practiced, and where the student's mind is balanced by well studied training.

Just as surely does a college sheet, fat with base ball and athletic items and woefully thin in its literary department, denote a college without system or training, save that of matter at the expense of mind.

The University Reporter, recognizing the force of that truth, has proportioned its departments admirably. But still there is much to be done to make the Reporter a first-class college weekly.

As it was once conducted it worked more injury than benefit to the University, but recently it has shown evidences of improvement. Editor T. W. Reed, who had it in charge for the first term this year, did much to improve its tone and enlarge its usefulness. At the expiration of his term he was succeeded by Mr. Steed, whose selection of Law as a profession lost to the ranks of journalism a born editor and polished writer. Under the skillful guidance of Editor Steed the Reporter has made remarkable advances, until it now ranks with the best of college weeklies.

We hope that those who will have charge of the Reporter next session will continue the work so creditably begun, and that they will leave nothing undone to make it the mode college journal.

OUR FACULTY

A REPORT has come from one of the Board, that the Trustees propose to make radical changes in the Faculty of the University, after the office of chancellor has been filled. It has even been stated that the resignation of certain professors will be expected and, if not received, requested. We hope that the report will prove without foundation.

The PANDORA has never missed an opportunity when one offered, or even when one had to be manufactured, to crack its little joke at the expense of the faculty, but, at the same time, we would regret the loss of one member from the able band. There are few institutions in the country, certainly none in the South, whose chairs are so ably filled as are those of the University of Georgia.

If there is a weak spot in the faculty it is difficult to find. The curriculum of the University is as thorough, and the standing as high as it ever was, and the best evidence of the efficiency of the professors is the mental culture of the young men who annually leave the college halls.

In reforms of whatever sort, there is always a danger of overzealousness, always a tendency to ultraism. We believe that the Board of Trustees is alive to the critical condition of affairs at the University, that they will spare no efforts to ensure the continuity of its usefulness. For this purpose indiscreet interference with the faculty will not only fail to promote the interests of the University, it will most seriously injure them. The mantles that have been worn for years so worthily, wear best on the shoulders that have lent them dignity.

It would come with exceeding ill grace from the Trustees of the University of Georgia, to say to men who have grown old in the service of that institution: "you have outlived your usefulness; make way for younger hearts and brighter minds."

The Philosophic Society.

THE Philosophic Society, which has been recently organized at the University of Georgia, meets a demand that has long been felt: a demand for more intimate mental association among the students, and a demand for higher intellectual culture than can be received from the text books of any college. The principles of the newly-founded society insure the accomplishment of these objects.

The existence of the Philosophic Society does not impair the usefulness of the two literary societies already established; their aims differ, as do their exercises.

In the establishment of this society, Dr. J. G. Armstrong, President of the Atlanta Philosophic Society, rendered much valuable assistance. His wise counsels, able addresses, and encouraging words lent to the new society a strength and enthusiasm without which success would have been impossible. Dr. Armstrong has never lost an opportunity to do good to the cause of education, and his kindly interest in the University of Georgia could not have been more unmistakably evidenced than by his earnest endeavors in behalf of the Philosophic Society. The handsome cane presented to the doctor by the students of the University was but a feeble attempt to express their gratitude, and the esteem in which they hold him. No man is to-day nearer the hearts of the students of the University of Georgia than Dr. Armstrong.
