HISTORY OF '95.

After many trials and much tribulation, in the way of entrance examinations, we are allowed to register and become that, which has been one of the ambitions of our lives, a college boy. On the 16th of September, 1891, there were forty-five of us, who had passed through the ordeal of an exam and were ready to participate in the pleasures of a student's life.

Our class is composed of men of nearly every size and condition. There are some amongst us, who, before their arrival, had even aspired to the dignity of a Junior. But alas! they very soon discovered that they had flown too high. There are some also who, no longer beardless youths, glory in that pride of a young man's heart, a moustache. '95 boasts of containing the youngest and the oldest men in college.

Now in giving a history of the most important events of the year, I suppose I must follow the example of my predecessors and begin with the election of our class officers. Our first meeting was held for that purpose in the Demosthenian hall, on the 16th day of September and resulted in the election of the usual officers. Since then we have held only one class meeting, for the purpose of electing a foot ball team.

Our lot, during the following quarter, was an easy one. That is after we had become accustomed to the taunts and ridicule of the older students. Now the athletic fever is raging in all its fury, and one after another of us has succumbed to its delightful influence. Although we had only one member of the University foot ball team, still this one reflected credit on the University and the class of '95.

The Christmas holidays were a pleasant cessation from our arduous duties, and the only fault that could be found with them is, they were too short. Upon our return to college, our studies, athletics and walking by the Lucy Cobb, was resumed just where we left off.

Although the election for Spring Debaters has not yet come to pass, it is a matter of certainty that '95 will receive her full quota.

Such is the uneventful history of a class which has just begun to make history. Wait a year or two and we will make it interesting.
