

only used at the weekly meetings of the U. G. B. D. Association, and the tin basin is used alternately as an art ornament, a collar box and a cuspidore. We may state that the room in question is not typical in the possession of the mirror, as there are only two others in the dormitory, and they are prominently located in the apartments of "Govy" and "Little Charlie."

The accompanying cut represents an article of furniture, typical of every Yahoo's room. Our artist has made an excellent and quite exact representation of the Yahooite's couch, omitting but one important point. Most of them have three shucks (with cobs) in lieu of a mattress, and some of them have four; but the occupants of the room in question, No. 6, recline on hollows, worn in the slats from constant use. As will be seen, this piece of furniture is more than half buggy. In addition there may sometimes be found one empty trunk, three holes with parts of socks around them, a coal-box, and a college yell.

Imagine these varied contents surrounded by four walls, once white, but now darkened by inscriptions and the presence of the occupants, and you have a fair representation of the apartment of a typical Yahooite, rendering only the presence of his smiling and magnetic countenance to shed a radiant light over all the scenes and set the mirror in violent action.

The scene represented in the following cut so suggested childish characteristics that we sent a copy of it to a pupil.

in the lower grade of the public schools, and requested him to write a short sketch upon the subject. Below we present the result :

THE COPS AND THE STUDENT.

The men in the picture are cops. Some call them policemen, but I think they is jes' plain cops.

The little fellers are students, and the cops have got the students. What did the students do? The cops said they wuz raisin' cain, but nobody could find the cain after it wuz raised. Well, they wuz jes' Athens cops, and folks don't 'spect them to tell the truth all the time. If the students wuz gyin' the cops, I'm glad, cos I think they ought to be gyed.

The students wuz carried to the station hous, but they did not stay long, cos the whole college come down and wanted to mob the p'liceman. I am glad they let Little and Harris go, but I think they orter scared Bower a little more, cos he is sorter fresh. But they wuz all good fellers, and the cops made asses of themselves by 'restin' them.

I'm down on the Athens cop.

FRANKIE.

Our views are so in consonance with those of our youthful correspondent that we refrain from expressing any further opinion. We can only say that we miss Old Cran and his force so well disposed toward the students.

Did you ever attend prayers on Saturday morning?

The writer did once upon a time.

The Chancellor and Professor Charbonnier are invariably found in their accustomed places. The other members of the faculty are taking their morning siesta and will be down in time (?) for recitations—maybe.

Sitting near the front, surprise of all surprises, were two supposed to be Whelchel and Gramling, but they were found to be Blasingame twirling his moustache.

The remainder of the vast audience was composed of two Freshmen, one Soph, and the spirit of a Junior's presence, which, many have remarked, surpasses the reality.
