

Freshman Poem.

How can muse of Freshmen sing?
Surely, surely, everything,
That upon their doings bore,
Has been written o'er and o'er.

Shall we say their caps are loud,
That their souls are gay—not proud?
Guy them on their child-like ways,
And their manners like the jays?

Rises come to those who wait,
Better "cut" than come in late;
Midnight oil will cost thee "mon.",
Bootlick! and thy work is done.

Gags like these no longer go,
Freshmen never change, and so,
'Pon my word, there's not a thing,
Not a single thing to sing.

"Blessings on thee, little man,"
Freshman year is but a span.
In thy pate these precepts keep,
And thou'llst never learn to weep!

"H."
