Dear Editor:

I had to write and say congratulations to Miss Debra Bolds. She is indeed a beautiful young lady. I'm sure her parents must really be proud of her. I know it was a hard decision for the students to select one person out of all the young ladies at Clarke Central but by the picture of Miss Bolds, I'm sure they could not have selected one more beautiful.

E.S.
Athens

Dear Mr. Harrison:

I have a niece going to Chase Street School, so you know how interested I was in the article about Mrs. Ireland. So far, I've heard nothing but good things about the school, and since I read the article I can see why things are run so smoothly. Keep up the good work Mrs. Ireland.

James Howard

Dear Editor:

It's so interesting to see Athens getting an increasing number of Black Businesses. One day I hope to return and start one of my own. I enjoy reading the magazine every month and I'm glad that I have the chance to get it. Thank you so much for starting subscriptions. It makes it so much easier than waiting for one of my relatives to send one each month.

J. Johnson
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Editor:

I am tired of always seeing something in your book about somebody from Clarke Central (even though they had a Black Queen), why don't you give us some coverage at Cedar Shoals.

Name withheld

Dear Mr. Harrison:

It seems that Mr. Edwards is getting better and better. It's wonderful to see someone so gifted with words. I look forward to reading his article each month.

Edward Lewis

Dear Editor:

Where is the police report that you've been printing each month? I would like to see it back.

BBH
CONFESSIONS:
WHAT CHRISTMAS MEANS TO ME . . .

BY THE YOUNG AND NOT SO YOUNG
Chad Davis

Christmas means when Santa Claus brings you toys if you be good. If you be bad, he'll bring ashes and put them in your eyes. I'm going to be good.

Joyce Little

Christmas, to me, means a time to show love and happiness to your family and friends. A time people should be friendly, joyful and loving to each other. A time to show you care. A time when people exchange gifts to the family and friends to express the feelings of love and care for them. Christmas, to me, is the most memorable time of the year. So have a Happy and a Merry Christmas.

Gwendean Kemp

Christmas is a holiday for everyone who loves it. To be with your family on that day and to share with people is Christmas. I love Christmas, Christmas is one of my big holidays.
J. T. Jones

Christmas is a time to recognize and acknowledge the birth of Christ. Christmas is a time to be thankful for being alive. Christmas is a time for visiting relatives and friends and being happy. Also making everyone happy I touch; and get in touch with. This is what Christmas means to me.

Sonya Jordan

When you don't mind your mamma and daddy. Some children they don't mind. If they don't Santa doesn't bring nothing.

---

Mrs. Inez Cunningham

To me, Christmas should mean a spirit of happiness and thankfulness for the birth of Christ and for sharing and making others happy. It makes me happy to make someone else happy.
Keith Heard

Christmas is a time when you have an opportunity to see all the members of your family. Those who live far away from home come together to share in the Christmas spirit.

Brenda Buckley

Christmas is a day which comes once a year. It's the time when people get together and rejoice. Where gifts are received as well as given. Although it has been said that Christmas is expensive, and only another day in the year; to me, it's not the price you pay, it's the thought of love you receive and give. And it's very true that it's another day in the year, but it is a special day indeed. Because it is the day in which our Lord Jesus Christ was born, born to bring peace throughout the world. And that's why we should be happy with praises and thanks. Merry Christmas & Happy New Year.

EACH MONTH'S ISSUE IS YOUR FRONT ROW SEAT TO WHAT PEOPLE ARE THINKING, SAYING & DOING!

ADMIT ONE
“No need to grumble sir”, remarked Louie, “you’ve been at it too long to expect things to be any different. People are people and they have problems and the people of a hundred years ago are the same now as they were then!” The Inspector rose slowly from his deep cushioned chair, lifted his coat from the rack behind him without looking. He had been on the force for twenty years and one of the things that had not changed was the location of the coat rack. “Louie, we’ve got a big one on our hands so come, come!” With Louie right behind him, the Inspector eased gracefully (more like a young buzzard on his first flight) out onto the streets. It was a pity that his mind was not moving as gracefully as his stride. It seems that the station received this call from a Mrs. Heldstrom and from all indications the dear lady was all in a bad way. And here was Louie, his aide, quizzing him about the call, the fog swirling about his head and the very quiet and empty streets. Oh yes! thought he, I’ll wager three pounds that this case will be a dilly!

Mrs. Heldstrom hesitantly opened her door. It irked the two policemen terribly so to see the old lady, eyes big and yellow, hair tied up and peeping! She’s downright smelly, thought Louie. The Inspector glanced at him as if he picked up the thought himself. Our man Ruskin could hold it no longer.

“My word madam, what is your problem? We’re policemen, not criminals!” His scowl vividly displayed irritation. “Well come in”, she muttered. After much dialogue or rather monologue on the part of Mrs. Heldstrom the policemen established this much: It appeared that the lady had rented a room to a very huge hairy and hideous looking individual. He had come in one gloomy night, about a week ago and she couldn’t get a very good look at him, especially with his collar up. I guess not, mused the Inspector, the old bag was probably more interested in the money! Those dearly beloved shillings! Nevertheless she went on to recount that since that night she had not been out for five seconds! The most peculiar thing she recalled was that the milkman would visit his door each morning, but left no milk, only cheese, cheddar cheese in fact. The plan was set; Inspector Ruskin and his partner Louie would take the room across from the gentleman’s room and observe slyly through their keyhole.

And so it went that they waited overnight for the milkman to arrive. Sure enough at about six a.m. he arrived, placed a substantial amount of cheddar cheese at the door and left. Then silence. Nothing happened for a solid hour. Brother Louie began asking irritating questions much to the Inspector’s distaste. “Louie please go easy on the questions my man!”, he shrieked quietly. This certainly was no time for such. The Inspector, a man not commonly known as an eloquent speaker was just about to launch a tirade of “colorful” words onto poor Louie when things began to happen!

The door across the hall was about to open. The knob turned first to the left and then to the right, and because it was a rather old one the door creaked loud and piercingly. Even the bravest of souls could not have fought back the surging power of fear when sensing an evil presence. As the door opened slightly wider no expectant ray of light shot forth from within the room out into the dimly lit hall, rather the light from the hall shone through the room’s blackness casting its tell-tell illumination onto a big grubby, hair and strange looking hand! Almost deftly the hand had the cheese, snatched it inside; the door slammed shut with a thud!! Dead silence. “My God sir!” screamed Louie, “What in creations was that?” “Careful there Louie, careful”, whispered Inspector Ruskin; “you mean WHO was that?” “Oh! no, sir. I mean WHAT was that?” the poor Louie was like a bowl of jello, quaking from head to toe! “Very well then my man”, the Inspector spoke in a tone of voice characterizing cool authority and composure, yet riddled with apprehension. “Sir, I know that this man or whatever has not done anything wrong, but I sense something odd, something very odd indeed!” Louie had calmed down considerably.

"CHARM"
THE CHRISTMAS CACTUS

by: Linda Davis

There couldn't be a more appropriate adornment for any mantle, table, or etageri than this most seasonal plant. It has a personality all its own. While being attractive in its winter green, it has chosen to protect its sensitive body by sporting its prickly quills. The holiday season has the same effect on it that it has on most of us, it really brings out the best. At Christmas the blooms appear in a soft virgin red, it's subtle beauty is breathtaking.

As I sit back and admire my purchase, I look around at all the things that influence my life. I realize that I have surrounded myself with only those things that make me feel comfortable and content. Everything here has a function. The pictures on the wall were selected because they are warm. The furniture always says sit down and rest. The music heightens my enjoyment of life, it lets me cry when I feel the urge, it makes me laugh when I feel happy. The whole environment is what I feel and what I am.

My cactus, I'll call "Charm", is now the newest addition to my life, and as such it must also serve a function. It's value will be measured by its service. Taking a few minutes to examine it more closely I choose to relate it to people. There really is no better species to use. Like people, it has character. While being desirable to look upon, it is painful to touch. But because it needs some attention, it rewards your efforts to care of it by revealing buds, soon to blossom and cloak you in radiance. Again like people it is fairly independent, it demands very little of you to renew its life. It draws its nourishment from the soil, it asks only for a little water and sunshine and in return it will give from its own breast a milky liquid that could sustain a life.

WHEN CELEBRATING
CHRISTMAS

by Frank Smith

Will Christmas be a joyful one for you this year? Will we take a look at the real reason for this day?

If we were to decide whether to celebrate Santa Claus or Jesus' birthday; then it would help us to realize the meaning of Christmas. The kids, of course, will receive gifts, etc. What will we as adults do? I can't tell you, but only suggest that in order for Black businesses to grow, we need to pitch in; in order for the less fortunate to have a joyful Christmas, they will have to be warm and have food to eat; and last but most certainly not least, we need a family reunion. It is at this reunion that we will find our presents for this Christmas and Christmases to come. And the God over this wide world will smile upon us and put a star in our crown.

After this reunion, it is then time for all the people of the world to unite and celebrate - because there is only one God. Do you know him?
Christmas means more than an annual celebration. It is a symbol of the generosity of the human spirit and as we approach the coming of another Christmas, we find fear and uncertainty everywhere. All the religions throughout history have been known to worship a "supreme being" and we find in all religions the concept embracing these commandments: thou shall not kill; thou shall not steal; thou shall love thy neighbor as thyself. But religion has not always been successful in getting man to be obedient to that power. It seems that the impression of the church today is that God is in a distant heaven far away from the world of man. But, Jesus said the Kingdom of God is within you, which means of course, that the inspiration of God and God's guidance emanates from within the individual and that conscience is accepted as the directing influence of the human mind. If one has a choice between two courses, one that is easy but not moral and one that is hard but nevertheless right - our conscience will tell us that the latter is the correct path to follow. We all know that the advice of conscience is never wrong and yet we often disobey it at will. Prayer in itself can seem to be a routine thing. Inside the mind of the individual is the real seat of judgment and if one prays with earnest, then his consciousness becomes a state of awareness, attuned to the inner Kingdom - the deep within-ness and gradually one becomes consciously aware of inner guidance, direction and wisdom. I think this is the proper time to quote from the condensation of the "Sermon of St. Thomas:"

"The greatest sin of the world today is the sin of despair" Militant Atheism in the world has robbed men of faith and destroyed their hope. When men have no hope, then violence rules the world. Where there is no hope, there is only war and hate. That is why the number of people starving, the diseased, the homeless, and dispossessed, has reached appalling proportions. Where there is no real hope in God, there is no love of God; where there is no love of God, there is no real love of man. A world without hope is a frustrated world. Without hope, man has no chance to open the eyes of his soul to the vision of God. Without hope, man can never achieve his true destiny. The only remedy for the world is a return to the love of God through faith and hope. Without hope, man is a slave to his passions, to what is lowest in him. Faith will open man's eyes to the true splendor of God and man. It will give him a vision to live for, a significant journey to make. This time of the year should remind those who lack fortune's good of what is taught by the church and God. God as judge, sees poverty as no disgrace, and that noon should be ashamed because he makes his living by toil. Jesus Christ has confirmed this by fact and deed, who for the salvation of men, being rich, became poor; and although he was the son of God and God himself, he willed himself to be seen and to be the son of a carpenter. Is not this carpenter's son, the son of Mary? Those who contemplate this divine example will more easily understand these truths. True dignity and excellence in men resides in moral living. The favor of God himself seems to incline more toward the unfortunate as a class; for Jesus Christ calls the poor, blessed, and he invites most lovingly all who are in labor or sorrow to come to him for solace, embracing with special love the lowly and those harrassed by injustice. Also the "True Church" does not consider it enough to point out the way of finding the cure of life's ills, but to administer the remedy itself, for it applies itself fully in the

Charm is beginning to really fit in. I can now admire and appreciate its value, as well as its beauty. It has by its many virtues earned my respect. The time I’ve spent getting to know Charm is well worthwhile. Upon entering the room, one glance brings to mind a lot of the things I sometimes take for granted or am unable to see even in those closest and dearest to me. I realize that although caring for Charm will take little effort on my part, to deny it any attention and appreciation that I can give will most certainly be the beginning of a slow and painful death of something that I hold very dear.

THE CASE OF THE CHEDDAR CHEESE CHAP

“Come on,” whispered the Inspector and very stealthily the two inched toward the door. At the count of three they flung themselves into the door tearing it away from its hinges.

“What in bloody hell is that?!!” Inspector Ruskin gasped for breath; his face was stone gray, his eyes were bigger than Mrs. Heldstrom’s! Across the room from then sitting before the fireplace wrapped in a smoking jacket and munching with admirable mannerism on a slice of cheddar cheese sat a very large and bespectacled RAT!!!
